A Striking Indictment.

The members of the medical profession will read with interest, if not with approbation, a book just published entitled "Medical Chaos and Crime," written by a physician, Dr. Norman Barnesby. It offers the most remarkable indictment of the medical profession presented in a long while. The author, whatever his other faults may be, can certainly not be accused of lack of frankness—he unhesitatingly calls a spade a spade. In fact, his frankness is really refreshing.

He tells of wrong diagnosis resulting in a cutting out of healthy organs—of instruments and sponges being left in cavities and sewn into the patient—of amputations being resorted to for fractures in order to avoid the trouble of setting the bones. A third of our cripples, he thinks, might have been saved to usefulness.

Professional ethics have often kept honorable physicians from denouncing those who recklessly use the knife or administer the drug; and this old policy of medical secrecy and infallibility has shielded many an abuse of the sort which Dr. Norman Barnesby here sets forth. Some think that professional courtesy requires them to stand pat and keep mum even in the presence of professional dishonor.

Some readers may think the author is unnecessarily severe, but it must be remembered that some of the greatest practitioners of our time have indulged in similar criticisms. It was only recently that Dr. George W. Wagoner, president of the Medical society of the state of Pennsylvania, in a lecture, went on to say: "If the mighty host of those who have been rushed into untimely graves by incompetent, pretending physicians could be marshaled into an army and marched in ghastly review before the astonished eyes of our indifferent legislators, what a ghost-like multitude of outraged victims there would be! One which would appall by its magnitude and horror, and excite the lawmakers to frenzy of action in the elimination of the incompetents from the ranks of those who assume to care for our health and lives."

And some of them have gone farther than this, and denounced all drug administration, with the exception of a few in the pharmacopeia, as the veriest quackery. It at least cannot be denied that the medical profession boasts its share of incompetence—perhaps a trifle more than its share.

Might Be Useful.

The legislative solons at Carson are split on the question of abolishing the state publicity commission. The committee to whom the repeal measure was referred made two reports, the majority one favoring the commission's abolition.

There may very properly be two views as regards this matter. If the commission in future would prove no more useful than it has the past two years it might as well be done away with. But, on the other hand, if the commission was headed by a live, practical man, with adequate funds behind him for a progressive campaign advertising the resources of the state, it might well justify the act creating it.

Sam Davis, chairman of the commission the past two years, alleges that the poor showing made by the commission during that period was due to lack of funds; that no proper provision was made for carrying on the work properly. This was largely true, and the responsibility for this must rest with the legislature itself.

It may readily be realized, however, that properly supported by a liberal financial appropriation such a commission would prove of inestimable advantage to the state. With hundreds of thousands of acres of idle land inviting settlement—as fertile as any land ever kissed by the sun or wet by the dew—within our borders, any feasible scheme that will stimulate settlement is to be encouraged by our legislators and by our people.

Nevada needs more people. A hundred thousand new settlers could easily find homes on our public domain, and with the development of irrigation enterprises, this number could be doubled. But there is but one approved method of getting these settlers—and that is by advertising. Opinion may legitimately differ as to the best method of doing this advertising, whether each county should attend to the matter to suit itself, or whether the state as a whole should handle it—but it should be done. The example of Southern California, which was settled solely by the liberal use of printers' ink, points the way which other Western states should follow. Whatever the legislature may do with this commission, let it not be taken as an abandonment of the advertising idea. We need more, rather than less, of it.

Judge Orr at Reno threw a bombshell into the divorce colony when he ruled in the Ford case that a merely perfunctory residence in the state, involving the making of no home or the acquisition of any property, was not sufficient to give a Nevada court jurisdiction. The court's decision in this matter was very, very timely. A residence which assumes no more than taking rooms at a hotel, here in Nevada, while all the time a complete establishment is maintained in the East, certainly cannot be interpreted, as meeting the requirement of the law; it certainly does not fulfill the spirit of the law, however it may align with its letter. Let the courts of the state exact proof of divorce applicants that actual bona fide residence has been taken up in Nevada, and there will be a woeful diminution in the number of these suits. All of which will make for the better reputation of the state.

The death of Col. Kosterlitzky, chief of the Mexican rurales in the state of Sonora, along the border—announcement of which is made in our dispatches—removes from the scene a man whose history reads like a romance, and who was well known all through this southwestern country. He was the typical soldier of fortune. Once an officer in the Austrian army, he was forced to resign on account of some scandal in which he became involved, and sailed for Mexico. Diaz is always willing to employ a trained soldier, and Kosterlitzky was put in command of the border rurales. There was little of law in his direction of affairs, and many an unwelcome prisoner, who would have to be conveyed a long distance to a carcel, was urged to escape only to be shot down like a dog when he attempted it. Kosterlitzky always took the short route in these cases—a dead prisoner was preferable to a live one. But he stamped out brigandage and pillage in his territory.

The bill introduced in the state legislature guaranteeing bank deposits is certainly an effort in the right direction, but whether this measure comes up to the requirements or not we do not know, not having been favored with a copy of the bill. Whatever may be its details, the idea back of the measure, of having the state give better protection to bank depositors, is the correct one. It might not be a bad idea if a law was adopted similar to that in force in Oklahoma. There each bank in the state guarantees every other bank, and when one fails the others must make good the people's loss. Under the circumstances, whether bank examiners be watchful or otherwise, there is a stringent supervision of banking institutions going on all the time, since they are watching each other. It is our impression that since the passage of this law there has not been a failure in the state.

That must be a great band of statesmen in the state senate. Despite the constitutional restriction that if at any time it takes an adjournment for three days it must stand adjourned sine die, the senate went right ahead and adjourned from Thursday to Monday. Had the blunder not been discovered in time the legislature would have been put out of business before its work had fairly begun. But that same night someone realized a blunder had been made, a hurried session was called and the adjournment resolution expunged from the record. A guardian would seem to be needed at Carson.

It might be pertinent to inquire why the late grand jury, when the evidence of two important witnesses of the crookedness of the Nye & Ormsby bank failure was offered it, failed to subpoena these witnesses? Their testimony was important and they should have been summoned to appear, but beyond extending them an invitation to come to Tonopah from Reno at their own expense, nothing was done in the matter. It looks as if they were rather half-hearted in their probing.

That imperial house of Austria is just too exclusive for this every-day earth. The Archduke Francis Ferdinand married the Duchess Sophie of Hohenberg morganatically, and because the archduke is heir to the throne, the Emperor Francis Joseph refuses to recognize the union. The Austrian house must be some potatoes when it deems a duchess of a semi-royal house not good enough for it. Some day the whole bunch will have to go to work, and then a lot of their exclusiveness will be discarded.

As usual, whenever the bubonic plague becomes epidemic in the Orient the natives oppose all hygienic measures and every attempt to stamp out the disease. When it recently broke out near Harbin, Manchuria, it could have been easily stamped out, had the Chinese co-operated with the officials, but they refused, and now the plague is sweeping over Northern China, and will take toll of thousands of lives before it is checked. Ignorance and disease usually go hand in hand.

The disbarment of Lawyer Schnitzer at Reno, for unprofessional methods in securing divorce business, will not arouse much sympathy from the decent members of his profession. Some of his advertisements, as published in Eastern newspapers and periodicals, were a direct reflection upon our state courts, and the punishment he has received was just what he deserved.

Assemblyman Byrne of Esmeralda, who recently sustained a fall in front of the capitol at Carson and broke his leg, says he will sue the city for damages because it did not keep the sidewalks clear of ice. If he wins a big damage suit on top of his salary, this will not be such a bad winter for him after all.

It's just about this time of the year that you hear that the watch you gave as a Xmas present has stopped running. And it gets worse as time goes on—or, rather, time gets worse as it goes on.

YOUNG MEN'S SERBIAN SOCIETY HAVE BIG TIME

Friday night the Young Men's Serbian Society of Tonopah had an enjoyable time at the Nevada theater, celebrating the natal day of their patron saint, Saint Sava.

The program was an interesting every point. It was rendered by members of the society and consisted of dances and songs. The performance began at 7 o'clock with an opening address by Z. Tommarovich, welcoming the gathering.

The program was an interesting one. Kolo and Horo, national dances, were rendered very successfully; "Gusle" and other national songs, all received warm applause. The closing address was made by N. Kosich on "American Citizenship," after which he thanked the members on the success of the meeting.

Having the honor of having with them a member of the royal house of Montenegro, Milo Martinovich, first cousin of King Nikola of Montenegro, he was invited to address the audience, which he did in graceful fashion, advising all to prove loyal always to their adopted land, but not to totally forget the fatherland. After three cheers for the red, white and blue, the meeting adjourned, all voting the occasion a most enjoyable one.
